90-Day Freeze n Wages, Prices Effect in U.K.

By Alvin Shuster

NDON, Nov. 6 (NYT).—Frime Minister Edward Heath today ced a 90-day freeze on wages, prices, rents and dividends in atic bid to curb soaring inflation.

aking in the House of Commons, Mr. Heath said that he was to resort to the compulsory powers after the collapse of his to win approval from business and labor for a voluntary nt on an anti-inflation package. He called on everyone to the law "regardless of their position, wealth and power." The appropriement represented a mejor reversal of past positions by Mr. Heath, who had often rejected government controls on wages and prices. And he came under fire from some members of his Conservative party as well as the Labor party opposition.

Union leaders promptly de-nounced the moves as "unwork-able," saying that too many loopholes remained for price in-creases. But there were no indi-cations tonight that the unions-would force a major confrontation by ignoring the standstill and demanding pay rises.

GOP Drive to Gain Control Of Congress Seems Doomed

By David S. Broder
WASHINGTON, Nov. 6 (WP).—The 1972 campaign—a curiously W disjointed affair from the beginning—ended today with indica-tions that the prospective landslide re-election of President Nixon will not dislodge Democrats from control of the House or Senate. A final pre-election survey showed that, despite the increasing evidence of Nixon coattails in some states, Republicans are likely to fall short of the five-seat gain they need for a Senate majority and the 39-seat pickup required to organize the House of Representatives. Democrathave good prospects of limiting them to half that number of new seats and of emerging from tomorrow's voting with a strengthened position in the state capitals, where they al-ready enjoy a 30-to-20 majority. The survey—based on a canvass by The Washington Post of the private judgments of both Republican and Democratic party leaders and reports from special correspondents in all 50 states— indicated that anything but a massive Nixon victory would be a Democratic presidential candidate George McGovern is rated ahead only in Massachusetts and the District of Columbia, There are fewer than a dozen other states—whose total electoral votes are 100 short of a majority—where he i- seen as being in a competitive position.

The South Dakota senatorwho waded through 23 primaries in an uphill struggle for the Democratic nomination, while Mr. Nixon was blithely ignoring two Republican challengers-remained publicly confident of duplicating Harry S. Truman's 1948 feat of confounding all the polls and prognostications.

But the latest survey produced only a few signs of the turn-around Sen. McGovern has been predicting, and awaiting ever since the upprecedented necessity of replacing his vice-presidential candidate created a crisis of credibility for his campaign. The final Boston Globe poll of Massachusetts, published yestergives Sen. McGove to 39 percent lead over Mr. Nixon, reversing the 48 to 44 percent lead the President carried into October.

The poll was taken between Oct. 31 and Nov. 2-after the White House had announced that a Vietnam settlement could be achieved in one more meeting of the peace negotiators.

The peace prospects apparently did not help Mr. Nixon in one of the most "dovish" of states, and the evidence from across the country is that Mr. Nixon has not benefited significantly anywhere from Vietnam develop-

Instead, what was reported in many states was a gradual return of wavering blue-collar Democrats to the McGovern column. The trend was most visible in such strongly Democratic states as Michigan, where yesterdey's final Detroit News poll gives Mr. Nixon only a 49 to 42 percent lead, down from a 13-point advantage in the previous poll.

But the significant point is that Mr. Nixon is still favored to win Michigan-a state that

The Minneapolis Tribune's statewide poll on the presidential con-test showed President Nixon ahead with a reduced margin, but a massive shift from Mr. union members.

The poll, the last of three on the presidential race, was published yesterday.

It found Sen. McGovern 17 points behind Mr. Nixon in the Oct. 27 to 29 period, whereas Mr. Nixon led by 24 points Oct. 6 to 9. and in a mid-September poll Mr. Nixon led by 23 points. Sen. McGovern is trailing by even wider margins in many of the other major states that are building-blocks of electoral victory. The final Field poll in Callfornia puts him 14 points behind. The final Chicago Sun-Times poll in Illinois puts him 20 points behind. Correspondents in Flori-da, Tesas, Ohio, Fennsylvania and New Jersey see lopsided Nixon margins as likely. Only New York among the electoral college giants is now viewed as a better bet than Michigan to join Massachusetts in the Mo-Govern column.

However, the final results of the New York Daily News straw poll, released last night, predict that President Nixon will win (Continued on Page 3, Col. 2)

2 Germanys End Negotiations With Accord on Basic Treaty

By David Binder

BERLIN, Nov. 6 (NYT) .- West and East Germany completed negotiations this evening on a basic treaty establishing formal relations for the first time between the two postwar German Agreement was reached with surprising speed by 7 p.m. after a four-hour session of the eighth and last round between State Secretaries Egon Bahr of Bonn and Michael Kohl of East Berlin. They started negotiations last

Last-minute demands by both sides had led officials in Bonn to speculate as late as this afternoon that the whole works would Announcement of the agreement came shortly after 7 p.m. when Mr. Bahr came out of East Berlin's ministerial council building on Klosterstrasse and distributed copies of a short communiqué. It said:

"Negotiations concerning the foundations of relations between the Federal Republic of Germany and the German Democratic Republic were completed."

Pending agreement of the two governments in divided Germany tomorrow, the draft treaty will be initialled "soon" in Bonn, the communiqué said, probably on

But the conclusion of the treaty by signature in East Berlin and ratification by the two German parliaments will have to await the eral elections on Nov. 19.

To Be Made Public

Bonn's Chancellor Willy Brandt has promised to present the contents of the treaty to the public beforehand, turning the federal election into a kind of West German plebiscite on the draft treaty. The essence of the treaty is mutual confirmation of the existence of the two German states as a result of the World War II collapse of the Third Reich. At the same time, the trenty leaves open the "national question" of how unification of the two states, one basically capitalist and one basically Communist, might be achieved.

In a last-minute move to beat the standstill, four automobile makers raised their prices, effective before Mr. Heath spoke, And more than 1.2 million workers won pay increases of more than 10 percent that will be allowed although officials consider increases on such a scale wildly inflationary.

The political repercussions of Mr. Heath's decision are likely to be felt for some time. The Labor opposition, led by former Prime Minister Harold Wilson, was clearly gloating in the crowded House of Commons over the shift in policy by Mr. Heath, whose campaign platform two years ago said: "We utterly reject the philosophy of compulsory wage control."

In a sharp exchange, Mr. Wilson, who imposed a freeze himself in 1966, said the measures represent Mr. Heath's "biggest reversal of position." Asked about such a possibility tonight, Mr. Kohl, the 43-year-old East German negotiator, said: "I think I would just laugh." He went on to praise the "realism" of the Brandt government in the negotiations.

Mr. Bahr was asked whether the Berlin wall would come down. The 50-year-old Bonn negotiator replied in his usual dry manner, this time in English: "I think nobody in the world-neither the Americans, the British or the French—could bring the wall down. We could not reach this, But I think the main point is that despite the fact of the wall we could agree that people living on both sides of the wall can

Kosygin Asks More Efficiency In Industry After Crop Failure

By Theodore Shabad

MOSCOW, Nov. 6 (NYT).-Premier Alexei N. Kosygin, in an unusually frank appraisal of the state of the Soviet economy, has called for stringent savings and eductions of waste in 1973 in the wake of the costly crop failure Reflecting an increasing strain on Soviet financial and investment resources following expenditure of an estimated $2 billion for grain from abroad, the Soviet leader demanded more efficient use of existing industrial capacity, barred new construction starts unless absolutely needed and said foreign currency should not be spent on goods that Soviet industry could produce fiself

He welcomed a growing ten-dency of the Soviet Union to aeil its advanced technology abroad, but also urged a more systematic effort to obtain Western licenses for modernization of outdated segments of domestic industry.

Mr. Kosygin made these and other judgments in a speech Sept. 30 to a meeting of the powerful State Planning Committee, the nation's economic planning agen-cy, at which a draft for the 1973 economic plan was discussed,

GOP Not Expected to Control Congress

Nixon Victory Unlikely to Bury Democrats

The poll has proved to be accurate in the past, picking the winners in 28 of 31 major national and local elections since

Unless this is a total misreading of the situation, Sen, McGovern could become the worstbeaten Democratic presidential nominee in the century since Horace Greeley carried only nine states in challenging the re-election of another notable Republican president, Ulysses S. Grant.

But 1972 unlike 1872, seems certain to produce unprecedented ticket-splitting, which will work to the Democrats' advantage. To cite but one of many examples provided by The Washington Post's correspondents, the final poll of Utah contests by The Deseret News in Salt Lake City shows Mr. Nixon leading Sen. McGovern, 65 to 17 percent, while Utah's popular Democratic gov-crnor, Calvin L. Rampto 1, leads his Republican challenger, Nicholas Strike, 60 to 24 percent. In the some state, a well entrenched Republican congressman, Sher-man P. Lloyd, is trailing his Democratio opponent, Wayno Owens, by 4 points, in another demonstration of ticket-splitting proclivities.

while analysts will have endiess material for post-morteus, there's little likelihood of the Democratic party's being destroyed even if Sen, McGovern is badly defeated.

Indeed, at the state and local level, Democrate seem to be doing surprisingly well. In the 18 governors' races (10 now held by Democrats and eight by Republicans), the correspondents report that Democrats are likely to hold their own or improve their posi-

Republicans have some chanca of taking over five states, the largest of them Missouri and North Carolina, Democrats are seriously challenging in six states, including Washington, Indiana

Important Battle

The Illinois battle is the most important, politically, and, despite the Nixon coattails; the contest between Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie, Republican and Dan Walker, Democrat, is rated too close to call at 51-to-49 for Gov Ogilvie in the final Sun-Times poll.

While Mr. Walker would carry more political weight than anyone else among the possible new governors, the biggest name would belong to John D. Rockefeller 4, the Democratic nominee against Gov. Arch A. Moore jr., Republican, of West Virginia. That race, too, is called a toss-up, with some observers giving Mr. Rockefeller a minuscule edge.

The battle for Senate control spreads across 33 states, with Republicans trying to capture at least five of the 14 Democraticheld seats at stake, in order to secure a tie vote that would let Vice-President Agnew designate Republican committee chairmen. In the last two weeks, the survey indicates, Democratic prospects have improved in the North and worsened in the South and Southwest, but the net result is to minimize Republican chances of a takeover. The easiest way to picture the Senate battle is to imagine it as pivoting on Delaware and Kentucky. In both those states, Republicans are struggling to protect seats they already hold

Delaware's Sen, J. Caleb Boggs. Republican, is hard-pressed by a 29-year-old Democratic challeuger, Joseph R. Biden, jr. In Kentucky, ex-Gov. Louie B. Nunn, Republican, has been lagging in a contest with State Sen. Walter (Dee) Enddleston for the seat of retiring Sen. John Sherman

Cooper, Republican, The key to salvaging both races is the Nixon coattails, and the President has visited both states in an effort to help out. Those states will report early tomorrow night, and if the Nixon coattalls fall to rescue Sen. Boggs or Mr. Numi, observers believe the GOP can just about forget its hopes of a Senate majority.

Republican hopes are looking a bit better. In Virginia, where Democrats were not werried two weeks ago, Republican challenger William L. Scott has Sen. William B. Spong jr., Democrat, on the defensive on the charge of "Mc-Governism" and now is given a chance of pulling an upset. Next door, in North Carolina, observers think conservative Jesse A. Helms, Republican, has pulled ahead of Rep. Nick Galifianakis, Democrat, who defeated Sen. B. Everett Jordan, Democrat, in the primary.

Republican candidates are underdogs, still, in Georgia and Alabama, but within striking range in states that seem certain to go heavily for Mr. Nixon, And in New Mexico and Oklahoma, where incumbent Democratic senators are retiring, Republicans are, respectively, confident and hopeful of winning.

New Mexico Race

Pete V. Domeneci, Republican, an Albuquerque lawyer, is rated ahead of insurance man Jack Daniels, Democrat, in the New Mexico race, where Mr. Nixon campaigned Saturday, and ex-Gor. Dewey F. Bartlett, Republlcan, is even with Rep. Ed Edmondson. Democrat, in Okla-hema, which Mr. Nixon visited Friday and is sure to carry by landslide proportions.

If the Republicans hold Delawere and Kentucky and win four of the six races in which they'ra competitive in the South and Southwest, they would be within striking range of the Senate majority.

But, oddly, the trend seems much against them in the rest of the country in the last two weeks. start with the most surprising report, newspaper polls in Maine and political observers on the scene say something the party headquarters in Washington can scarcely credit: Rep. William D. Hathaway, Democrat, is seriously threatening to end the 24-year Senate career of Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, Republican.

The Bangor Daily News' final poll, published Saturday, put Rep. Hathaway ahead 42.9 to 35.2 with 21.9 percent undecided. Others attest that Rep. Hathaway, has made major gains, even if he is not in front.

In Rhode Island, where Sen. Clairborne Pell, Democrat, for months has been No. 1 on the Republicans' list of likely losers, he now appears to have an even chance of surviving. Sen. Pell led ex-Gov. John H.

Chafee, Republican, who quit as secretary of the Navy to make the race, by 2 points in the final Providence Journal poll, with enough undecided to throw the race either way. Attorney General Frank J.

Kelley. Democrat, apparently is still lagging in his Michigan fight against Senate Minority Whip Robert P. Griffin, Republican, but in Iowa, a race that was not on any Republican's "worry list" last month, has suddenly turned into king-sized headache. Sen. Jack Miller, Republican, on the defensive in a newspaper investigation of his sponsorship of a tax-bill amendment, has seen his lead over Democrat Dick Clark drop from 20 points to 7 points in the latest poll, and seems ripe for an upset, Ironically, Mr. Clark, a congressional aide, took the nomination only because his boss, Rep. John C. Culver. D., Jowa, decided that Sen. Miller was too tough to beat.

In South Dakota, where alling Sen Kari E. Mundt, Republican, is retiring. Republicans are likely to lose the seat. Rep. James Abourezk, Democrat, has held to a diminishing lead over Republican nominee Robert Hirsch, despite the fact that he's found Sen. McGovern an unexpected in his own state. Finally. Democrats have hopes of an upset in Idaho, where college president William E. (Bud) Davis is challenging Rep. James A. McLure, Republican, for the seat of retiring Sen. Len B. Jordan. Republican.

Adding it up, the Republicans and Democrats each have about half a dozen prospects for take-overs. GOP strategists concede that there's "less than a 50-50 chance" of parlaying that into a Senate majority, and a Democrat South and west of there, the says, "There's no damn way they're going to do it."

There are a few other senators Democrats Lee Metcalf of Montana and Thomas J. McIntyre of New Hampshire; Republicans John G. Tower of Texas, Gordon Allott of Colorado and Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon-who have spirited opposition. But a defeat for any of them would be a real

At least 13 of the 25 senators seeking re-election are virtually immune from defeat, and an even higher proportion of the repre-sentatives would fall into that category.

Republicans are expected to gain only 12 to 25 House seats, at best, despite the Nixon coattails, and the main reason is that it has become increasingly difficult to dislodge a House incumbent of either party. Needing 39 more seats for a majority. Republicans have found few Democrats like freshmen Rep. Mike McCormack of Washington or Rep. Teno Roncalio of Wyoming with insufficient seniority to protect them against an unfavorable tide.

It's even uncertain how adverse the tide is at the congressional level Both Gallup and Harris polls this fall reported that a majority of voters favored retention of a Democratic Congress. In most states, there's some other statewide contest higher up on the ballot to protect the Democratic congressman from the full brunt of the Nixon impact, and man-for-man, the Democrats seem to be holding their own.

The best evidence of that is found in the three races where redistricting has paired incumbents of opposite parties. The Democrats are favored to win two of those, in Iowa and Wilconsin, and are rated an even bet in third one, in Texas. the

Redistricting Hurts

What is likely to cost the Democrats seats more than coattails is redistricting, retirements and the after-effects of their own primaries. Around the country, i is possible to count at least eight Democratic House seats that have disappeared in reapportionment-two in New York City, two in Chicago, one in Philadelphia, and one each in Tennessee, North Dakota and West Virginia.

The newly created House scats are mainly in suburban areas, where Democrats have tougher sledding. But thanks to their control of redistricting, Democrate are favored to win two of the three new seats in Florida and three of the five new ones in California.

They are not so fortunate in other states. In New York, Illinois and Indiana, Republicans drew the lines with such skill that the Democrats face possible multiple-seat losses.

They have risks, too, in districts Nevada, Colorado and South Carolina, where incumbents were defeated in the primary by more liberal challengers, who now may have trouble holding the seats against the GOP.

In the South, however, where Mr. Nixon is likely to roll up his biggest majorities, the Democratic congressional margin is protected by the power of the incumbents Only where Democrats are retiring or running for other office -most notably in Mississippi where three of the five incumbents have retired-do the Democrats seem likely to be damaged by the coattail vote.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 6 (AP). -Meyer Lansky, the alleged Mafia leader, departed here today en route to Asuncion, Paraguay, the police reported.

Lansky left Israel last night and flew to Europe, then to Rio de Janeiro, arriving this morning. In Rio he boarded a flight to Bnenos Aires,

He remained in police custody at the airport here for four hours before leaving for Paraguay. Argentine police quoted an American FBI agent based here as saying: "We are watching his movements closely. We are interested in this man." Argentine police sources said Lansky apparently had a visa to enter Paraguay.

He had been ordered to leave Israel by next Priday. U.S. authorities have revoked his passport because be is wanted there on a variety of charges. To return would mean arrest.

Israel had refused Lansky citi-

Lansky, 70, told the newspaper Maariv on the eve of his departure that his more than two years in Israel, desnite the unsuccessful fight for citizenship, were "the happiest of my life . . . I have bought a burial plot here. If I can't come back alive, at least my body will." "We consider the case closed," an Interior Ministry spokesman said. "His name has been put on the blacklist so he cannot return to Israel."

The alleged underworld leader arrived in Israel in July, 1970, as 2 tourist. When the government refused to renew his visa, he applied for eithenship under the law of return, whereby any Jew becomes an Israeli unless he is considered a threat to the public peace. The Israeli Supreme Court upheld the government's contention that he was such a threat.

NEW YORK, NOT. 6 (NYT) .-Fears expressed last year that exhaust from supersonic transports might seriously deplete the ozona that protects life on earth from ultraviolet radiation are a legitimate cause for concern, according to a panel of scientists appointed by the National Research Council.

In its report the panel says that a variety of uncertainties makes a realistic assessment difficult. Nevertheless, it adds, "the possibility of serious effects on the normal ozone content cannot be dismissed." The findings were made simultaneously with reports that protagonists of an American supersonic transport have new hones for revival of the program. The program was denied further funds by Congress last spring. Meanwhile, there are no

Indians Declare War' on U Still Occupy Capital Build

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8 (AP). Indians occupying the Bureau of Indian Affairs said today they were declaring war on the United States. They also threatened to destroy the building they had held since Thursday.

The Indians emphasized their war declaration, as the deadline passed for what they said was a Department of Interior order to evacuate or be thrown out.

They can have the building after it is gutted. When we go, the building goes, said Russell Means, a leader of the Trail of Broken Treaties Caravan, which took over the building.
He said the approximately 400

Indians in the building spent last night planning their defense against any police attempt to storm their makeshift barricades. U.S. District Court Judge John

Pratt ordered the arrest of the Indians today, and the order was delivered to U.S. marshals at 2:15 p.m., with orders to serve it on the Indians no later than 6 pm and arrest those still in the building. · A Justice Department spokesman said at 4:30 p.m. that U.S. Deputy Attorney General Raiph Erickson, in command of the federal response, had not yet decided how to proceed if the Indians refused to leave the building voluntarily.

About 35 Indians armed with clubs and makeshift tomahawks stood at the building's entrance near a barricade formed by several crossed teepee poles, Smaller, sharpened polcs jutted out from the barricade. We have now declared war

Libyan Premier Sees Pompidou 'Privately'

PARIS, Nov. 6 (Reutera).— Libyan Premier Abdel Salam Jal-loud today called on President Georges Pompidou during a discreet visit to France thought to be linked with Libya's large arms purchases here.

Though well informed sources said Maj. Jalloud has already met Prime Minister Pierre Messmer and Foreign Minister Maurice Schumann, a Foreign Ministry spokesman commented, "I'm afraid this is a private visit. There will be no statement on the question."

The Elysee presidential palace confirmed that President Pompidou would meet Major Jalloud about an hour before the meeting if his demands were not met,

He asked the airline to place on board the DC-8 a suitcase and shoulder bag previously loaded in the Boeing's luggage compartment. Police said these were later found to contain six bombs and large quantities of an ap-parently explosive powder-

Airline officials said that apart from a pistol and 50 rounds of additional ammunition, Mr. Naksoka also carried into the Boeing cockpit a bag, which he claimed contained explosives. But investigations so far had not established whether the hijacker could have carried out his threat to hlow up the plane.

Police reports quoted Mr. Nakaoka as saying he had lived in Los Angeles sporadically since last year. But he hecame fed up with life in the United States and had been planning to go to Cuba for the last six months.

The Big Four-Still

There is an oddly metallic ring about the phrase "Big Four," especially when it is applied to the German problem. It suggests repeated but ineffective meetings of ambassadors, foreign ministers, heads of government, verhalizing a situation that could assume more serious aspects in a Berlin blockade, rearmament, the Wall. Yes, there is still a Big Four, and they still insist upon their rights and authority in a Germany still divided. But now there is a difference.

Recognition of this has come about in part through the efforts of West and East Germany to reach some kind of modus vivendi that will be more conducive to a humane and reasonably comfortable reiationship than has existed for the past 15 years or so. Those efforts have achieved a coosiderable degree of success, although they are not definitive, and over them hangs the shadow of the forthcoming elections in West

But even that tentative success could not have been achieved without a benevoient attitude toward the diplomacy of the two Germanys by the Big Four. More, the Soviet Union, France, Great Britain and the United States serve as a hackstop against the worst results of any breakdown in the German discussions. Their continued assertion of their rights, given the understandings they have attained, is a necessary guarantee that if the proposed agreement is not carried into effect, it will not be followed by dangerons retaliatory measures on either side of the

Assuming that East and West Germany do manage to resolve their most urgent differences and agree to disagree about the rest, there remains the rather knotty question of their entry into the United Nations. The hugbear of national sovereignty, which permits the Maldive Islands to become a memher of the world body hut hars representation to, say, Bangladesh, has never quite succumbed to the notion of de facto individuality for states divided, whether the division is formally factual as that in Germany (or between China and Taiwan) or is simply the reaction of some nationalist minority, like the more radical blacks in the United States or the separatist French in

Obviously, the UN could not get much work accomplished if it had to consider the case of every irredenta, of every group discontented with the flag it is supposed to acknowledge. Nor is there much hope for peace if either the centripetal aspirations of the larger entities (India, for example) or the centrifugal ambitions of the smaller (Basques, Bretons or Scottish nationalists)

But some concessions to reality are essential, if the UN is not to he considered a body composed of wholly arbitrary and often accidental sovereignties. Such a concession might well he made for the states divided by the military arrangements following World War II. And the Big Four-plus China-could have a major role in assuring this consummation, so devoutly to be wished.

Reconciliation and South Asia

In the South Asian subcontinent, just about the one troubled place in the world where the people who live there are being left to work oot their problems for themselves, India and Pakistan and Bangladesh seem to be making slow if ragged and uncertain progress towards a durable association of their own. Whether that association will rate the name "peace" remains for the region itself to determine, After 25 years of hostility, including the uprooting of millions and three wars, no early answer should he expected. Yet if only because the better part of a hillion human heings are involved, and because less than a year ago terror and war dominated their lives, their effort must command attentive respect.

At the moment India and Pakistan are engaged in what might best he called a scuffle of nerves over the demarcation of the last mile or so of the 580-mile "line of control" in Kashmir—the line where their troops halted in the armistice reached last Dec. 17. When this scuffle runs its course, the agreed condition will have been met for evacuation of some 5.000 square miles of Pakistani territory in the Punjab region by Indian forces, and of some 70 miles of Indian territory there by the Pakistanis. This in turn should mellow the climate in which India will weigh releasing the 93,000 Pakistani POWs it still holds: to the mutual embarrassment of Mrs. Gandhi (because she's ultimately responsible) and Mr. Bhutto (hecause in this matter he's heipless), some prisoners have been killed in camp inci-

India hopes to go on to link its return of prisoners to Pakistan's recognition of Sangiadesh. Since within a year Pakistan has lost a war and half its country and much of its former sense of world importance and eif-esteem, recognition of its sundered half s no trivial matter. It does great credit to .ir. Bhutio that in his own way he appears o be moving his country towards this dificult and necessary step. India is helping, in its own way, hy soft-pedaling its demand -one which would he even more difficult for Pakistan to consider now-that the 'line of control" in long-dispoted Kashmir be accepted as the permanent international

But, right-thinking skeptics will say, this is only politics, games politicians play, circuses. What about economics, the way people live, bread? Quite so. The instant unravelling of the subcontinent's political tangles would leave hundreds of millions of its inhabitants still mired in the misery of their daily lives. Yet the process of working out the political tangles could, over a period of time, produce important economic increments in the form of reduced defense budgets, home-directed political energies, regional trade and technical cooperation, and an atmosphere in which the human condition rather than national "honor" received the first priority it deserves. * * *

It is precisely here, of course, that any new American administration must seek a proper kind and measure of involvement with the subcontinent. As creditable as has been Mr. Nixon's record as a provider of emergency relief to Bangladesh, his overall policy towards the subcontinent has still not recovered an appropriate halance as hetween India and Pakistan and an appropriate detachment from considerations of superpower politics. Granted, Mrs. Ghandi, still bitter at the Nixon "tilt" towards Pakistan last year, has harely come half way. In her reserve, however, may lie the hasis of a new and more positive relationship with the United States-a relationship other developing countries might also find attractive. "The countries of Asia," she declares, "now share many problems which can be solved through cooperation among ourselves rather than merely through assistance from the outside." This is an attitude on which a realistic and enlightened American policy of mntual cooperation could well be built.

Mr. Nixon, We Agree

It is now 12 days since Henry A. Klsnger confidently proclaimed that "peace s at hand" in Indochina, but the war rags on, exacting its ever mounting toll in merican and Vietnamese lives.

The agreement negotiated by Dr. Kisnger in Paris has now been substantively nestioned not only by President Thieu in algon but apparently by President Nixon imself. While continuing to assure the sters of the imminence of the peace pledged our years ago, Mr. Nixon in the closing days ' the campaign has resorted to rhetoric he as employed in the past to justify military calation—the invasions of Cambodia and aos, the resumption of the bombing of orth Vietnam, the mining of North Vietimese ports.

Under strikingly similar circumstances on the eve of the 1963 presidential election. candidate Nixon declared:

"Developments of the past few days clearly indicate that the American people need fresh new ideas, new men and new leadership if we are to bring an end to the war . . . when we consider the fact that it was only three days ago that the hopes for peace were tremendously high . . . and that now those hopes are quite discouraging because of developments since then, it is clear that if we are going to avoid what could be a dipiomatic disaster it is going to be necessary to get some new men and a united

PARIS-The women of England complain that they have not yet a right of suffrage equal to that of men. The latter, as in America, may begin to vote at the age of 21, but the women not before they have turned 30. If equalization is to take place, it would be wise, in the opinion of many students of politics, to increase the minimum age of the male voter, instead of lowering that of the female. The argument used is that sound judgment on public matters rarely comes to anyone before the age of 30.

U.S. Election: Voting for Immobility

By David S. Broder

WASHINGTON—An election when all is said and donecomes down to the question of power, and the 1972 election is as much a test of the voters' attitudes toward political power as it is a referendum on Richard Nixon, George McGovern, Vietnam, corruntion or any other issue.

My guess is that the results are going to be ambiguous because the public attitude toward governmental power is equivocal and

That's been the condition in the United States for many years now, as the voters have shown repeatedly that they are both attracted and frightened by the exercise of power by their leaders.

On Short Rein

More than any other single factor, that ambivalence explains why for 20 years we have had divided government in Washington and many states, why strong executives at every level of government have been ousted or put on short rein.

In the 1950s, the voters said they liked Ike-but saddled him with a Democratic Congress. In 1960 and 1968, they elected Presidents by the oarrowest of margins and denied them effective majorities in the legislative

Only once in the last 20 years have they delivered a clear mandate. In 1964, they ignored Barry Goldwater's warning that Lyndon Johnson was "so powerful, you plug him in and the whole country lights up," and they gave Johnson both a personal landslide and a compliant congressional majority.

used that power to pass a massive legislative program, to escalate the Vietnam war and to trigger inflation-they cut back his congressional majority and curbed his authority.

This year the voters seem both to crave strong leadership and to cringe from it.

McGovern has been badly hurt by a reputation for weakness, stemming from the Engleton incident and the shifts of position on some policy questions. Time after time, voters have told in-

We, your readers, would appre-

Conversely, it's become clear that Mr. Nixon substantially strengthened his prospects for reelection by three bold uses of executive power: the wage-price freeze: the diplomatic opening with China; and (hard as it is for some of us critics to admit) the bombing-blockade of North

Those three actions converted him, in the minds of many voters, from the hapless, passive President of his first two years in office into a leader who is, as so many voters say, "trying his best" to shape a satisfactory outcome in an inherently imperfect world. But even as be is applauded for using his power, Mr. Nixon is feared and distrusted. A significant minority of the voters suspect him of maneuvering the peace talks for his own advantage. Even more clearly, an important bloc of voters now says that Watergate, the wheat deal and the assorted other "scandals" of the Nixon administration fit a pattern of the misuse of power for selfish interests.

It would be incorrect, I think, to view this suspicion as a personal problem of this particular President's, It has, I'm afraid, become generic a distrust of government and of government's sence, the exercise of power.

It shows most clearly in a question Washington Post reporters have been asking voters all year about whether they think the country is better off if the presidency and Congress are controlled by the same party.

Negative Answer

Overwhelmingly, the answer negative. "It's better," the typical voter says, "if it's evenly balanced."

This "equilibrium model," to give it a fancy name, is something new in our political thinking; it is the doctrine of checks-andbalances carried to a point at which immobility becomes the most desirable characteristic of government.

This is a step beyond the ticket-splitting that became so pervasive in the 1950s and 1960s. It is a subtle inclination, on the part of many voters, to employ the ballot box to paralyze the government—so as to minimize the risk of harm from governmental actions.

so difficult for any government to move strongly and forcefully, to address the nation's problems in the years ahead.

Politics and Reality

By Anthony Lewis

BOSTON-A central argument for President Nixon in this election, and a most effective one, has been that he is the more practical candidate. Even some who would define themselves as liberal intellectuals support Nixon as the hard-nosed politician, abie to deal with the not-so-pleasant realities of American life and the American character.

A good way to test that argument is to try to look past election day and ask oneself: What are the really profound internal problems facing the United States? Is a second Nixon administration likely to sense these deeper needs and deal with them can bloodstream today-the bitterness of class and race. Economic disparities here are so striking, the contrasts of wealth and degradation, that it is hardly surprising if a large minority feels forgotten and embittered What must it mean to an unemployed worker to see on television that one individual has given $1 million to the Nixon campaign fund? In race relations the more open: We see them in the faces of Canarsie as we did at Little Rock. No one can believe anymore in panaceas for the problems of economics and race. But is there reason to hope that a second Nixon administration would at least address them squarely and sensitively? Not after the cynicism of the first four years on these matters, for again and again the President and his men have sought not solotions but political issues.

Everyone will have his own perception of the problems that shadow the American future. For me, after months of travel around this country, a few stand out as most significant.

On school busing, for example, the administration was urged early on to deal affirmatively with the crisis in urban education; it refused, worked instead to arouse racial fears and then pushed radical anti-busing legislation. Or on welfare: As the rolls grew, the President first proposed reform and then abandoned it when an attitude of contempt toward those on welfare seemed more politically profitable.

More broadly, the state of American society cries out for tax reform and other measures to curb the extremes of economic inequality. A British Tory government would find such ideas conservative, but they have found no place in the consciousness of John Connaily or Richard Nixon A second aspect of the United States that casts a shadow on the future is the role of the military. The symbols are in part physical: The acres of Air Force cars parked in Duluth, Minn, the Army helicopters circling over San Francisco Bay. But more important than these impressions size and waste is the sense pervasive military influence in American foreign and even domestic policy.

Call for Arms

To expect effective restraint on the military role in American life from a Nixon government would be fatuous optimism indeed. This President's sense of obligation to the military was nicely illustrated when he felt it necessary to follow the first strategic arms agreement with a call for increased arms spending. The affair of Gen. La. velle raised sinister questions, still unanswered, about the integrity of civilian controls on the American war-making system.

Even more interesting is the Nixon attitude toward what President Eisenhower called the military-industrial complex. To an amazing extent this administration has adopted the old Marxist view that, to prosper, a capitalist economy needs war or preparation for war. Its budget director said directly that cutting defense spending as Sen. McGovern suggested would mean mass unemployment and deep damage to "the economy's technological base." That is a measure of how far we have gone in dependence on the military.

Civil liberty is a third area of concern. The framers of our Constitution sought to sefeguard it both hy specific protections of the individual and by diffusing the powers of government. Today everyone can see that official power is hecoming concentrated in one place, in the executive branch of the federal government; and the individual feels his ability to resist official intrusion or control weakening,

Would anyone seriously suggest looking to Richard Nixon for protection of individual liberty? Put aside his earlier years and consider only some events of the last four: The attempts to intimidate press and television and book publishers; the audacious claim of a constitutional power to tap anyone's telephone on alleged security grounds without specific legal authority; brazen espionage against the opposition party. The darkest prospect in four more years would be the continuation of that record-and of judicial appointments designed to support it.

McGovern's Mistakes

George McGovern has made his mistakes as a candidate. But they do not remotely rise to the level of doubt raised by Richard Nixon's attitude toward the most fundamental domestic problems of the United States. Some talk about the President becoming a statesman after this, his last. election. But men cannot change the characters they have made themselves in a lifetime. These are matters of character. of the spirit,

If the miracle happened and George McGovern won this election, I think many who have declared themselves for Nixon would nevertheless rejoice. They would understand that Nixon's genius lay in appealing to the worst in us, to selfishness and meanness masquerading as realism, and they would share in the hopes for a rebirth of American energy and idealism.

phone rang relentlessly, despite the monitoring of her secretary. In her grave voice, Miss Baudrier replied to each call with interest, concern, patience and politeness. Her courtesy has become legendary. On her desk was a list of 200 names of people whom she intends to call back. French radio and television circles have the reputation of being mysogynous. "A woman must be irreproachable. I can't bang on the table or yell or use the language I might want to, I must command by persussion. The hand in the velvet glove. As in love, how far can you go without going too far?" In September, 1969, Pierre Des-graupes was named news director of Channel-1 the same day Miss Baudrier was nominated for the same post on Channel-2.

"Where would you prefer to go, with Desgraupes or with Baudrier?" one journalist asked an-

However, under Miss Baudrier although she will never admit she was in savage competition-Channel-2 made so many advances that male television critics in the written press said that it should be renamed Channel-1.

She introduced a daily halfhour televised news magazine focusing on such aspects of French life as kindergartens, military service, toorism, police, stock market, problems of peasants and shopkeepers.

A monthly program, "The Third Eye," presented features in com-parative depth. The public found the reportage on painters who counterfeit old masters and how Frenchmen try to chest on taxes as fascinating as detective stories. She was the first to obtain the accord of the French medical profession to do a television film

Conclusions

Although the drug program was greeted with salvos of praise for its honesty and its sympathetic treatment, Jacques Siciler in Le Monde chided her conclusions. "It is not without a certain astonishment, a certain deception that we have heard the proposition, of Jacqueline Baudrier on the therapy of friendship and affection towards the young, a moral lesson too easily reassuring after this descent into Hell." She admits to a natural optimism. Sometimes it seems a trifle elementary. Her principles, she feels, are expressed in Paul Eluard's "Liberty," a rather highschoolish poem which begins: "On my schoolboy's notebook, On my desk and the trees.

On the sands and on the snow, I write your name." Nonetheless, her news flair and tenacity brought Channel-2 a series of firsts, King Hussein of Jordan and Mrs. Indira Gandhi of India held televised press con-ferences in the studio, the first times in the history of French television that beeds of state had agreed to be interviewed live. She obtained a long interview with André Malraux, whom she regards as the greatest living intel-ligence in France. For a memorial program a year after the death of Charles de Gaulle, she beld a long and intimate conversation with Philippe de Gaulle on his

She has a way of answering questions about herself with large-sounding phrases that seem to have been memorized long ago and are pulled out of n mental file compartment when required.
"Television is the most revolutionary invention since the printing press. It brings the light of the world to the most remote village. It is a privilege to be a journalist in an era when everything goes faster than the imagination. It is exalting and terrible. Reality goes beyond fic-

When she moved over to the top administrative job of Chan-nel-1, 71 male cohorts moved along with her. This group is strongly behind Miss Baudrier. Says her associate, Jacques Alexandre, who four years ago was doubtful he could work for a woman, "She is a grand patronin the true sense of the word. She has a lot of imagination and an undeniable instinct. She gives her ideas and respects those of her collaborators, whom she car-ries along with her smile and her feminine charm."

Says Léon Zitrone, who also jumped channels, "She has a refined courtesy. I never could resist a pretty woman," Because of advance programming, the Baudrier influence on Channel-1 will not really be seen until 1974, However, flashes have already been observed. In 1971 the growers sold 21.7 percent I than in 1970, as against 11.2 percent more for the big firms. The Price of Champagne

And Why It Is Going Up

By Jon Winroth

PHEIMS, France, Nov. 6 (HHT).—It takes a kilo and a hall grapes to make a hottle of champagne. Everything clas b equal, as goes the price of grapes so goes the price of the wine

The harvest is over in Champagne and despite a large (about 500,000 barrels or 140 million bottles) of poor quality.

year the government-supervised price for the best champ-grapes has source 24 percent, from 5.41 france a kilo to 6.69.

Why do had grapes cost so much? The main reason is the vineyard owners are no longer happy with their role of sup to the hig champagne-making firms (Moët & Chandon, Mumm, e)

Many growers are themselves turning part of their crops tempted to make into champagne themselves. As François Legras, independent grower-producer at Choolit the Côte des Blancs, explains, "At first it was a matter of mount now it has become a moral question. At this year's price, no more remunerative to make one's own champagne than to grapes to the firms, but the growers want to be liberated from ties to the firms. They want to be the masters of their own ded to make and sell their own champagne, which they can do n cheaply than the firms. "For this reason some firms have been thinking of offering growers stock shares as well as cash payment for their grapes order to give them a feeling of beinging and security.

"The firms want security as well, for when the growers making their own champagne, there are not enough grapes for firms in a year of small production."

Export Market

Mr. Legras adds that there is still a lot of progress to be m by the growers where quality is concerned and they are in no posit to attack the export market where they account for only 11 perc

He himself, however, is entering the export market and has problem selling his own production (150,000 bottles this year) Bernard Geoffroy, new cellarmaster of G.H. Mumm and Co. Rheims, feels, however, that the growers are asking for a lot all once. Next year the firms hope more or less to hold the price li The other part of the problem is that more and more gra are needed to cover ever-increasing sales of champagee, In 1 116 million bottles were sold, up 14 percent over 1970. Unfortunat the 1971 crop produced only 78 million bottles and therefore stocks replenished by the enormous 1970 crop are already be According to Mr. Geoffroy, this year's crop is a large one less than had originally been hoped (600,000 barrels vs. 650,000) The grapes were very healthy but never had a chance to ri properly after late flowering and a cold summer. Some of grapes in the Côte des Blanes froze before they could be picked. the real problem was insufficient sugar and high acidity.

The eugar in the grapes produced only about 3.5 percent alect so it was necessary to enrich the musts with enough sugar to not the alcoholic degree by another 2 percent. It is hoped that the b maile acid content of the grapes can be reduced during the me lactic fermentation but "a priori a vintage year would seem to excluded," says Mr. Geoffroy.

Mumm is confident of producing a good blended champage any case because of plentiful reserves from previous years. The current vintage champagne is 1966, which will eventually be tollor by 1969 and 1971, as no doubt it will at other firms.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Japanese See Steel Sales to China

A group of six Japanese steelmakers expects to conclude an agreement Nov. 10 under which China will purchase 500,000 tons of ordinary steel before the end of the year and another one million tons in the 1978 first half, Nippon Steel Corp. reports. Negotiations are currently under way in Tokyo. The other five concerns are Kawasaki Steel, Nippon Kokan, Sumitomo Metal Industries, Nisshim Steel and Kobe Steel

BMW Says Profit Has Improved

Bayerische Motoren Werke (BMW) says earnings improved in the first nine months from the like 1971 period while sales have risen 22.6 per-"We expect to earn a satisfactory dividend for the year plus a reserves allocation that willbe markedly higher than in the preceding two years," the Munich-based company reports. For 1971, BMW paid an unchanged 6 deutsche marks per share dividend and allocated 5 million DM from 32.2 million DM net profit to reserves.

Car Sales in U.S. Surge

New U.S. car sales were higher in October than in any other month on record. Total sales of domestic and imported cars were about 1.968 million, up about 1.7 percent from the 1971 month, which was the previous record. Though the four U.S. auto makers had an extremely strong sales month, the record was actually made possible by gains made by the importers, who scored a 17.2 percent sales surge from 1971. The imports made their year-to-year gains, bowever, in comparison with their lowest monthly share-of-market performance in all of 1971, a month that saw their first year-to-year sales decline after a string of 12 monthly year-to-year increases. Volkswagen sales were up 34 percent from last year's month, but sales for the year so far are still 13.9 percent behind the total in the 1971 period. The importers garnered 12.7 percent of the total car market last month-better than the anemic 11.1 percent captured in October 1971-but it was the weakest market share this year. The strongest import gainer was Mazda, which sells the only Wankel rotary-powered cars sold in volume. Its sales soured 138.2 percent in the month, and it was the fifth-biggest selling import, edging past Fiat and Capri, which often vie for fifth place behind VW, Toyota, Datsun and Opel.

First National Bank of Boston has opened banks in London, Paris and Lazzembourg, which will concentrate on different types of business. In London, an investment bank was established to deal in medium and long-term lending, called First National Boston Ltd. It will also underwrite and make a market in Eurobonds. A full service branch of the Boston bank was opened in Paris, where it will specialize in French-franc and shortterm Eurocurrency financing. U.S. Purchasing Agents Optimistic

Some 48 percent of U.S. purchasing executives surveyed in October reported increases in new orders, up from 43 percent in September, according to the National Association of Purchasing Agents. Declines in orders were reported by 6 percent, compared with 7 percent in September The rate of production in October "slowed slightly," with 38 percent reporting improvements compared to 44 percent in September. The asso-ciation says purchasing agents continued to show healthy optimism for the immediate future. The survey found 90-day advance buying reported by 19 percent of those surveyed compared to 15 per-

Roland Violoi, head of the agricultural and food sector of the French Planning Commission, blames the government's policy of price restraints, mounting costs and dwindling profit margins.

Swiss President Hits Deficit Set For 1973 Budget

BERN, Nov. 6 (Reuters) .- The Swiss cabinet proposed today that parliament approve a 1973 federal budget running 196,6 million francs (about $51.2 million) in the red. In its message, the cabinet de-scribed the deficit as "unsatisfac-tory." President and Pinance Minister Nello Celio warned of impending important decisions on finance policy in light of the goveroment's inability to balance expenses with income.

The president said that price stability must take precedence over all other concerns. Even if Switzerland's close involvement in the world economy at times made the adoption of a correct economic position difficult, this involvment could not alons be held responsible for the upward price movement, he said.

Not only must revenue be rais ed. he added, but expenditure and venue must be better matched. Defense costs will remain the largest single item, accounting for 22 percent of the 11.36-billion-franc budget.

About 300 major British craporations or groups are already operating in France, according to private survey.

Of these, 93 are in the elec-trical and mechanical sectors, 29 in services and transportation, 22 each in retail distribution and chemicals, 18 in foods and drinks, 14 in public works and building construction, 13 in textiles, 11 in paper and printing, as well as smaller numbers in banking, light industry, mining, industrial holdings, insurance and agricultural

The success of British investors, after those from the United States, is attributed by French officials to superior salesmanship and international knowhow, usually backed by a broad financial base at home. The fact that the selling price of a number of family-owned French firms is relatively low by European standards is also an added attraction.

Other major reasons advanced by French industrialists include the difficulty of finding adequate domestic financial support for needed do-or-die expansion plans and the possibility of new outlets by powerful foreign offered

U.S. Panel Acts to Curb Interest Rates

Pressure on Banks By Burns Unit Seen

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP-DJ). -President Nixon's Committee on Interest and Dividends (CID) has been confronting influential U.S. bankers with a warning: Keep loan charges down or face interest rate controls.

Numerous bankers interviewed in recent days conceded privately that they have been approached by CID members. While the bankers generally declined to disclose the nature of the conversations and with whom they spoke, in at least one case it is known the contact man was Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the CID and also of the Federal Reserve Board.

It appears, so far, that the panel's campaign is having clout, with some bankers seemingly agreeing to what might be called an informal, voluntary program of interest-rate restraint.

Last week, for instance, Bankers Trust, the nation's seventb largest bank, announced that it was temporarily abandoning its use of a formula to automatically determine its prime, or minimum interest, rate on loans to cor-

'Chat' With CID William H. Moore, chairman of Bankers Trust, said the action was taken "to insure the closest cooperation with the administration's program to control inflation." He conceded that a "chat" with the CID had played a role in the decision. Irving Trust, another New York bank with a "floating" prime rate, disclosed it is considering "several possible modifications" to its formula for pegging the rate to interest rates in the money

One Eastern banker contacted by the committee recently said it was indicated "pretty clearly" that 6 percent would be considered by the administration as the upper limit for the banking industry's prime rate.

Currently almost all of the nation's large banks bave 5 3/4 per-cent prime rates. First National City Bank and Mellon National Bank, which had their floating prime rates at 5 7/8 percent, dropped them back to 5 3/4 percent effective today, reflecting a recent reduction in moneymarket interest rates

Needham Going to U.S.S.R., But Strong Seeks NYSE Role in Trade Gain Erased

NEW YORK, Nov. ? (NYT) .-James J. Needham, the new chairman of the New York Stock Exchange, has accepted an invitation by the Soviet Union's bank of foreign trade to visit Moscow later this week.

The purpose of the visit, according to an exchange official, "is to explore how the securities industry might play a major rolo in the development of trade and commerce between the United States and the Soviet Union.

"The chairman," the spokesman explained, "will apprise them of the wide range of services provid-. ed by listed companies on the exchange, particularly their ability to raise capital.
"Listed companies on our exchange control 83 percent of all U.S. corporate assets. Moreover, the stock exchange is in a unique position because it is a bridge between our country's financial markets and the largest corporate enterprises.

"The exchange, therefore, could play on important role in the further development of cooperation between the Soviet Union and the U.S. business comma-

As a guest of the Soviet Union's bank of foreign trade, Mr. Needham will be taken on tours of industrial plants and will also look into the country's system of retailing consumer goods, spokesman added.

The new chairman of the stock exchange has been trying to de-sign a subtle but potentially significant policy change to enhance the role and image of the Big Board throughout the world.

He has decided to meet with business and financial leaders throughout the United States and in major foreign centers of commerce for discussions on how the exchange can improve its performance for investors.

He was in London this week, Next March or April he will go to Tokyo and in between be will take his board of directors to Chicago and then to Los Angeles or San Francisco for their regular monthly meetings and for in-formal gatherings with local business leaders.

The new program is reminiscent of the "own your share of American business" marketing theme employed by G. Keith Funston, a former Big Board president,

Broker Bearish on Polaroid, Cites Production Problems

NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (AP-DJ). -Wall Street bulls on Polaroid, of which there are many, would be quick to take issue with the hearish sentiment at Merrill Lynch. They will tell you that Polaroid's SX-70 pocket-sized camera, to be introduced Friday in Florida, will be a big winner However, Polaroid is still refusing to commit itself to a national introduction date in the first quarter. In fact, it is suggesting that the camera could be marketed in several regions first onfore deciding on a national distribution. Peter Wensberg, senior Polaroid vice-president, indicates that a firm decision on national marketing could he months away. What seems to bother several Wall Streeters and could be at the heart of Polaroid's uncertainty over its 1973 SX-70 plans is the view in some quarters that Polaroid is having production problems on its highly complex new camera and sophisticated film; also, there is some concern that the quality of the film still tends to be erratic. In a sell recommendation which Merrill Lynch has put out, it declares: "Although the camera is almost totally automatic, indications are that picture quality isn't uniform, particularly flash pictures." It argues that this factor is likely to limit both film usage and camera sales.

A Polaroid official recently visited the Wall Street Journal's offices and took a number of flash pictures, some of which did not come out too well. Mr. Wensberg responds that it is possible to take a bad picture "But it can take beautiful pictures . and there isn't any problem with the flash unit or the design of the system," he asserts.

Merrill Lynch warns that delays in mass production of the system are still possible. It further contends there is likely to "considerable disenchantment" if national marketing of the SX-70 does not get under way early in 1973 as many expect.

Asked whether there were any production problems, Edward

Bedrosian the company's liaison with Wall Street, declines to answer. Mr. Bedrosian does say: "We're going through a learning We're not making the volumes [of cameras] we'd like." He stressed, though, that these are "normal problems" for a company moving a highly sophisticated new system into highvolume, high-quality, reasonablecost production.

Stocks Rise,

Glamours' Downtrend Affects General List

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, Nov. 6 (NYT) -The stock market's pre-election rally—in full swing last week— simmered down today as prices edged generally higher in another active session on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average, regarded in Wall Street currently as an investor opinion poll of sorts, finished at its highest level in nearly four years.

It ended at 934.80, up 0.68, for the best reading since 985.21 on Dec. 3, 1968. In the final four sessions of last week, the Dow surged ahead 37.70.

While the blue-chip Dow crept higher, many glamour issues were market losers today, a sign that stocks with lofty price-earnings ratios have slipped from favor, at least temporarily. The market opened strong and big block trades dotted the tune in the first hour. At 10:30 2.11. the Dow was ahead more than 4. But prices soon began to sag-depressed partly by the action of the glamours—and it took a mild rally in mid-afternon to put the

Dow in plus territory again. Volume, topping 20 million shares for the fourth session in a row, amounted to 21.33 million

Polaroid, tumbling 6 3.4 to 116, was a prominent loser among the glamours. The stock plunged initially on reports that Merrill Lynch had issued a negative appraisal on Polaroid and its new SX-70 camera. In addition, an investment advisory service has reduced its earnings estimate on Polaroid. On the stock table, Polaroid is selling at 83 times its latest 12-month earnings.

Another photography

Eastman Kodak, ranked as the biggest point loser among the 30. Dow industrials, falling 3 1.6 to 141 5/8. Profit-taking was a factor in Eastman Kodak, which traded last week at a new high of 145 and now is selling at 45 times earnings.

Among the day's biggest losers were IBM, off 6 3/4 to 381, Burroughs, 8 3/6 to 210 3/4, Xerox, S to 155.
Prices advanced in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange, although some heavily traded stocks retreated. The Amex index was np 0.02 to 25.16. Advances edged declines, 520 to 449. Turnover was 4.44 million shares, versus 4.62 million Friday

The bond market continued its recent advance with corporate bonds rising about 1/8 to 1/4 in spots and governments up about 1.37 1.12 1/8.

This was the year we decided international tourism would offer great economic advantages to a wide spectrum af Partuguese citizens. After several important years of planning, we began to put our original ideas to wark: first, the organization of a touristic enterprise which, in the shortest possible period of time, would improve and enhance the existing National Tourism, thereby putting us into competition on the International market. In 1967 we began to grow.

I looked "problematic" up in two dictionaries which agreed that, in logic, the term applies to a proposition that is possibly, but not necessarily, true—as, for example, the existence of unicorns. This is clearly not a description of the work of Edward Gorey. What his fey and elegant books of "humor" communicate to his readers is entirely, absolutely true. Problematic is only the method which produces such astonishing wrinkles and quirks in deep grammar. Or do I mean metasyntax?

"The Doubtful Guest," "The Object Lesson," "The Curious Sofa." and "The Insect God"; two of his jovially grisly alphabets: "A is for AMY who fell down the, stars B is for BASIL assaulted by bears," and so on, and various tales of unlucky adventure, disaster and betrayal. They are illustrated by Mr. Gorey's fine and macabre pen. "The West Wing," in fact, is nothing but illustrations recounting a wordless fable of mysterious loss whose effect is that Edward Lear and Magritte had collaborated or coalesced. probably the latter. "The Bug Book." is a brightly illustrated children's story whose moral is that violence pays. But it's hopeless to write about Gorey in terms of what his work seems to be about, hopeless to stick labels on. Black comedy? The term is once too broad and too narrow. Parody? But he's parody-ing more than the apparent butt of the joke. And to say that he's so funny that aficionados fall about laughing when re-reading him for the 20th time is true, but not a description. Best approach him, perhaps, clutching the statement of Roland Barthes that "myth is a type of speech." The Gorey canon is a type of speech unique to itself. The content handled is the kind of Victorian literature which the passage of a century has turned into pure camp. Not that Gorey is writing camp, he isn't. But if one takes the sentimental moral imperatives of the Victorians, applies them to a world of violence. disorder and early sorrow and discards the obligatory happy ending, one begins to see what is wrong with sentimentality and (maybe) moral imperatives too. To do that straight, however, is itself heavily Victorian. The effective attacks on fusty 19thcentury morality were made in quite a different vein by Lear, by Oscar Wilde, by Beardsley, by Firbank. They were attacks on content by means of style. Yes-

to argue about morals, it simply declared that what the Establishment conceived as moral axioms weren't worth talking about. tion. His mockery of establishmentarianism is elegantly conveyed by his ability to use its language: "It was already Thurs-

Style and style alone affirms the intent, but doe it so surely that when it was once read aloud at a discussion of Pornography and Literature a member of the audience ros and declared bimself appalled (This was some years ago.)

Gorey's messages to the reader then, are conveyed by his strie by the content of text and not always-consonant content of draw. sion with which these elements attract and repel each other. It this they resemble the social myths which Barthes uses to illustrate his theories. Because they are conscious, designed comments on life made by a subtle and powerful mind they trans-mute merc representation into art; minor art, perhaps, but authentic and totally individual.

Developmentally. Gorey has been moving away from the more overt (though not unsubtle) humor of the first book collected here. "The Unstrung Harp." toward the sort of white-on-white, black-on-black statements of minimal art. So this is really a retrospective exhibition. I love it. I hope you do too.

South's actual bid of one notrump correctly showed a heart stopper but incorrectly suggested moderate strength, perhaps 6 to 9 points. North had no hesitation raising to three no-trump, 2 highly precarlous contract.

After the routine lead of the heart four, South makes his contract by winning the first trick in his hand and ducking a club to East. This establishes eight tricks, and the declarer cannot be prevented from obtaining a ninth, However West selected the dia-mond nine as his opening lead, thus playing a short safe suit instead of a long, tricky one.

After the passive diamond lead, South had a hopeless task. He won in the dummy and played the ace, king and a third club. West won with the queen and led another safe diamond. South won again in dummy, cashed the two club winners and led a low spade. East put up the queen and returned a third diamond. Dummy was left with two doubleton kings, and had to lead away from one of them at the 10th trick. The defense automatically took three of the last four tricks to beat the contract.

There comes a time in bridge as in life when a routine decision is not good enough. In excep-tionable cases, rules of thumb may have to be abandoned.

One such case concerns opening leads against three no trump when an opponent is known to have a powerful and balanced hand. The declarer's big problem will be shortage of entries to the weak hand for finessing purposes. so the normal attacking lead from a long suit may be unwise.

This situation arises quite commonly when the declarer has, for example, made a two-no-trump opening bld. But the principle applies equally when it is clear that a powerhouse will appear in the dummy. The diagramed deal is an example.

When be finished counting his 22 points, North was surprised to hear an opening bid of one heart on his right. He contributed a take-out dooble, the orthodox move, and gave his partner a problem.

South was too weak to consider a penalty pass. He should

But the Raiders were stopped on the Chiefs' 6-yard line at the start of the fourth quarter and the game might as well have ended then.

Ed Podelak, the farm boy from lows, was as responsible as anyone for the Chiefs' superiority. Dawson ran Podolsk hard all afternoon and he gained 115 yards in 27 carries, several of them for key first downs.

Good Blocking

Podolak had tremendous blocking on the sweeps against Oakland's left side from his pulling guards, Ed Budde and Mo Moor-man. The Chiefs had 50 rushing plays to Oakland's 23 and thus controlled the game. Missed tackles by the Raiders also burt their cause.

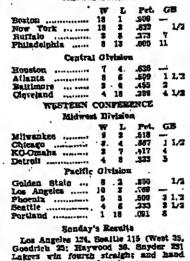

"It was not so much what we did or did not do," said Madden. They just executed so well."
In other games, as reported

The running Willie Ellison and rookie Jim Bertelson and the cautious passing of Roman Gabriel gave Los Angeles a 20-7 home victory over Atlanta. Gabriel, nursing a sore elbow, was limited to short passes. On the Rams' first touchdown drive, of 64 yards in the first quarter, Gabriel threw just once—a 14yard completion to Bertelsen. Ellison dove over from the 1-yard line for the touchdown at 9:10. The Rams stopped the Falcons' ground game, and when quarter-back Bob Berry took to the air, linebacker Jim Purnell intercepted in the second period. David Ray kicked a 36-yard field goal to give the Rams a 10-0 lead. Bertelsen, who played college football at Texas, gained 71 yards on 11 carries. Ellison carried 27 times for 144 yards.

Ohio State and Michigan also kept alive the possibility of another meeting of major undefeated, untied teams Nov. 25. The Buckeyes came from behind to beat Minnesota, 27-19. Michigan took advantage of three Indiana mistakes to beat the Hoosiers, 21-7. If they keep the pace, Ohio State and Michigan will settle the Big Ten title and a Rose Bowl berth in the game at Columbus, Ohio. Southern California kept its record clean and the University of California, Los Angeles, remained unbesten in the Pacific-8 race so that the teams also have the chance of a big showdown, for the other Rose Bowl berth, Nov. 18.

Vote on State Tax Support

Colorado to Settle Fate Of 1976 Winter Games

By Fred Brown

DENVER, Nov. 6 (WP).—The Olympic spirit has run head-on into environmentalists' and taxpayers' revolt in Colorado.

Colorado voters will decide tomorrow whether they want any of their state tax money spent to support the 1976 Winter Olympic Games. If they say they don't, the 1976 Games will probably be moved to some other city and, perhaps, some other country.

Voters in Denver, the host city, are being asked a similar question about city tax money. Indications are the vote will be close. The anti-Olympic forces are predicting a 55-45 victory. The pro-Olympians released a poll Thursday showing a 52-43 margin in favor of the Games.

Everybody's Talking

The issue is perhaps the hottest of the 1972 campaign in Colorado. It seems to be the subject of more debate than anything elss on the

On the "pro" side are most of the state's elected officials and most of the business community—in short, the established, tradi-tional interests who see the Games as something to be proud of and who appear hurt that so many people don't agree with them.

On the other side is a coalition of skeptics and idealists who look on the Games as benefiting the prosperous at the expense of the not-so-prosperous, and who think of themselves as fighting the

The proponents are represented by Coloradans for the 1976 Winter Olympic Games, a well-financed, well-heeled, well-placed group, whose executive director is Fenry Kimbrough, chief side to Lt. Gov. John

The opponents are represented principally by Citizens for Colorado's Future (CGF), an informal yet effective coalition conceived by State Rep. Richard Lamm, a Denver attorney with a deep environmental commitment who is an accountant and a Democrat.

It was CCF which collected 77,000 signatures on a petition to place a constitutional amendment on the state ballot, 10,000 signatures for an amendment to the Denver City Charter and 25,000 signatures. tures on an anti-Olympic statement presented to the International Olympic Committee during the 1972 Winter Games at Sapporo, Japan. $18,000 Spent

Since its formation in January, CCF has spent roughly $18,000, Lamm said, including the cost of sending three persons to Sapport. The money for the trips came from an heiress to one of Colorado's largest family fortunes.

The pro-Olympic group, on the other hand, is spending 10 times as much—"around $175,000," Kimbrough said—to get people to vote against the referendum and for the Olympics.

The organization's extensive newspaper, broadcast and biliboard advertising urges Coloradans to "light the Olympic torch." It features endorsement by Colorado Gov. John Love and such Olympic figures as skater Janet Lynn; Bob Beattle, former U.S. ski team coach; Bohby Lewis, coach of the boxing team, and Jesse Owens.

Spotlight Shifts The opposition centered at first on the possibility of environmental damage. More recently, the spotlight has shifted to the uncertain costs and uncertain planning.

The first pocket of discontent was in Evergreen, a town just west of Denver where the Rockies begin to fold upward, The Denver Organizing Committee, now the Denrer Olympic Organizing Committee, said it would stage some events there. But residents of Evergreen and neighboring communities formed a committee, Protect Our Mountain Environment (POME).

They objected to ski runs slicing through their neighborhoods. They pointed out that their climate is milder even than that of Denver, where the weather in February often is dry and in the 50s Pahrenhelt for days on end.

Change of Venue

Except for the luge, most events now have been moved away from the Evergreen area. The alpine skiing events are scheduled for Beaver Creek, near the ski resort town of Vall, about 90 air miles west of Denver. The Nordic events, subject to IOC approval, will be at Steamhoat Springs, 130 miles by air from the host city. There

The only things left for Denver are the pageantry and the Skat-The uncertainty about sites unnerved Lemm and his cohorts early in the planning. Lamm was among the co-sponsors of an early resolution favoring the Olympics, but it didn't take him long to change his mind. He objects to the "open-ended commitment" that Denver and Colorado have made. "You just can't expect different communities every four years to build these expensive facilities," he said. "The Olympians tell you they're handing you a torch, but they're really throwing you a hot potato."

If Lamm is the founder and president of what he calls the loose and "egalitarian" CCF organization, then Sam W. Brown jr. is its Brown, 29, one of Gene McCarthy's youthful supporters at the 1965 Democratic Netional Convention and well known in Washington as a member of the Victnem Moratorium Committee, came to Colorado in 1970. Brown resents accusations that he is a carpetbagger who came to Colorado merely looking for a cause to exploit. He has bought a house here, he points out. "I'm not interested in experimenting on the body politic." he said. His reasons for opposing the 1976 Games "boil down to a com-hination of environmental questions, economic questions—who profits and who pays—and, finally, I guess, how they relate to the question The pro-Olympians are appealing to state pride. "We have an obligation," Kimbrough said. He cites his committee's poll as evidence that the slight anti-Olympic edge is swinging toward a pro-

"We're picking up steam all the way," he said. If the amendments pass tomorrow, and the 1976 Winter Olympics are deprived of state and city funding, it probably will mean that other sources will be shut off, too. In other words, Kimbrough said, if the referendum passes, "the Olympics are over as far as Colorado is concerned. There's just no LECCE, Italy, Nov. 6 (Reuters:.-The 1972 Rudolf Valentino prize for outstanding film stars bas been awarded to Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, the organizers of the prize have announced. The competition is organized by an Italian journalist who has the backing of the authorities of the region of Puglia, where the late film star was born. He died in 1926.

"But I don't think these warmakers should be allowed to just come back and take up their lives where they left off. Perhaps at some future date, after all the emotions have calmed down, some president might pardon them. But for now they should be made to pay the price for their actions. If we grant amnesty, they won't even realize they did anything wrong."

I was getting discouraged. "Every country in the world forgives the people who start a war, once the peace agreement is signed. Without that, no one would have faith in his leaders."

"No amnesty." Farfinkle said. "What kind of punishment would you propose for those who got us into and kept us in the

"But, Farfinkle," I saio, "what you're proposing to do would punish the cream of the American establishment. If given amnesty, some of these men may turn out to be fine, upstanding citizens."

NEW YORK, (NYT)—Even Sally, who sold them by the neashore, probably failed to realize the infinite variety of structure, form and design to be found among sea shells.

But the diversity of architecture, engineering and coloration did not escape the artistic eye of Andreas Feminger, the nature photographer whose camera's-eye view of sea shells is on view at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

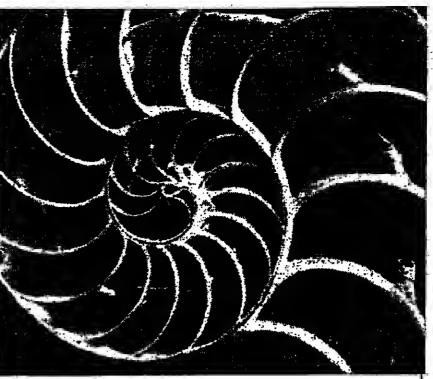

William K. Emerson, who is the museum's curator of invertebrates and a malacologist (student of mollusks), the exhibition emphasizes characteristics of shells that the buman eye might easily overlook: tent-like patterns, mathematically precise spirals, perfect symmetry, twisted spines

Although in some cases the patterns imitate surroundings and appear to serve as protection against predators, Dr. Emerson noted that many highly colored species live deep down on the dark ocean floor and are active only at night.

said that mollusk shells, which consist mainly of calcium carbonate, or lime, were deposited by a skin-like covering on the soft body of the animal called the mantle. In many species, the mantle periodically adds to the shell throughout the life of the mollusk, sometimes first reabsorbing spines or nodules along the outer lip of the shell to keep them from crowding out the living animal it houses, Dr. The many colors and designs are laid down by pigment cells,
